Going back to school this year will be different!

Some of my friends will be learning at home and some of my friends will be going back to school with me!

My school will look a little different. I will see fewer desks and other furniture and more open space. The schedule of the day will also be different as I will be in my classroom most of the day.

But the building and many of the teachers and staff will be the same and I like that!
Everyone, including teachers and students, will be wearing face masks. We will wash our hands often and we will have to keep space between all of us.

This is called “social distancing”. I think of it as a “double bubble” to protect me and my friends.

I do not like things to be different but I am accepting change. I know my parents and teachers will help me to learn and be safe!

It is okay to think 'a little bit' about the change. It is a really good idea to think about doing work and fun things in school.
